

GRANTED BY THE ROOT CONSTITUTION

THE CHARTER OF THE CEILING TRIALS

THE EXTENT

A department of the measure of how far a proven system will go, and where it refuses, held with perpetual succession.

A system is driven past everything its field will ever produce, to the structural boundary at which it refuses — not to a number chosen in advance.

IT MAY

- Establish the three depths of a system, and name it by the depth attained
- Measure the torque of a system in every direction it may be turned, holding the receipt for every turn
- Issue THE CEILING TRIALS CERTIFICATE, and no other instrument

IT MAY NEVER

- No ceiling is ever recalled from memory — it is read from the record, or measured again
- No figure is printed without its source beneath it
- No limit is set upon an acquirer's growth, and this office does not know who will acquire

Headed by the Assay Régleur, the office that holds the assay of this house.

No authority was asked, because none confers what this instrument claims. It claims EXISTENCE, not permission. Recognition follows existence — it has never preceded it, for any body that has ever held a charter.

Open either address in a browser and compare. Neither value could have been known before the moment of sealing, which is why this charter cannot have been made earlier than it claims.

Or run the verifier that travels with it. It stands on public standards alone, imports nothing of this house and asks nothing of it — seven checks, four distinct exit codes, and proven to refuse an altered charter.
